With a prevalence rate of about 8.1% over individuals over the age of 10 years, NSSI is a vital issue for schools. NSSI is highly confronting and distressing to family, friends, and educators. The behaviour or its consequences results in significant personal costs, such as permanent physical scarring, significant distress, interference with interpersonal relationships, and school.

An Essential PD Workshop for all educators and wellbeing staff

This full day workshop will focus on practical information and skills to manage nonsuicidal self-injury (NSSI) that can be assimilated directly back into your school environment. Madeline's workshop provides a comprehensive profile of NSSI, identification of young people who may be at greater risk, practical and effective harm minimisation and strategies that can be employed to help decrease self-injurious behaviours. The session will end with ways to minimise the potential contagion effects of NSSI within your school.
